

Dylan Jones serves as the National Marina Manufacturers Association (NMMA)'s special water access counsel in its Washington, D.C., government relations office.

Dylan joined NMMA following several years working in Congress. During his time on the Hill, Dylan served as the legislative director for Rep. Carolyn McCarthy (D-NY), advised Rep. Shelley Berkley (D-NV) on transportation issues, and worked on environmental and economic development projects for Rep. Paul Kanjorski (D-PA). Dylan came to Washington, D.C., after practicing maritime law with the Seattle law firm of Holmes, Weddle & Barcott. Dylan is a graduate of Macalester College and Tulane Law School, where he received a certificate of specialization in maritime law.