

Ed Pasterick is a Senior Policy Advisor in the Mitigation Directorate of FEMA and has worked with the National Flood Insurance Program for 34 years. In that time he has served as Assistant Administrator for Insurance Operations, Director of the Financial Division, and Director of Marketing and Risk Communication. He also served for a time as Acting Executive Administrator of the NFIP.

Ed has been one of the primary spokesman for the NFIP with Congress and the media, and regularly represents the NFIP in both national and international conferences on emergency management and hazard mitigation. He also participated in a major research project for the National Science Foundation, which resulted in the publication Paying the Price: The Status and Role of Insurance Against Natural Disasters in the United States. Ed is also a graduate of National Defense University's course in National Security Strategy

He currently works primarily in the area of industry relations and deals extensively on policy issues and matters relating to the insurance companies that participate in the Write-Your-Own Program. He is a member of the WYO Standards Committee.